Need for Speed: The Run (NCsoft, 2015) is a street racing game developed by Ghost Games. It was released for Microsoft Windows and OS X on May 4, 2015. It is the eighth installment in the Need for Speed franchise. The game takes place in the fictional European city of Los Angeles, which is ruled by a...FURTHER a season which has been characterised by form – or at least a body of form – has been dominated by injuries. These have been both general (neck, foot) and particular (knee, eye), but the race for Norwich City's coveted automatic promotion place has been blighted by them. Injury stories have been covered, and it is important to have perspective – the season has only just begun. But here are some of the worst names of the season so far. Damien Duff The Celt has been plagued by injury this season, and was criticised by Paul Lambert after sustaining an injury in a challenge with Alfie Mawson, something he subsequently apologised for. The next day he suffered a second-degree dislocation of his shoulder, something which has kept him out since August. Victor Moses The Nigerian winger's form has dipped in the past two games, something that has been blamed, in part at least, by the fact he's been nursing a foot injury for much of the campaign. It's probably the reason he found himself on the bench when the Canaries found themselves 2-0 down to Fulham. Tomas Mejias It's been a tale of two halves for the Costa Rican stopper. He started the season looking certain to be the Canaries' e24f408de9
