LinkDownload .Prevalence of metabolic syndrome in adults with intellectual disability in Sweden: a population-based national survey. Intellectual disability (ID) affects 2-3% of the population, and is associated with increased prevalence of cardiovascular risk factors. Metabolic syndrome (MS) is an emerging threat for morbidity and mortality in the general population and also in people with ID. People with ID have been under-represented in epidemiological studies of metabolic disorders in the USA, so there is little evidence of their prevalence. To determine the prevalence of MS in an adult population with ID in Sweden and compare it with the general population. The study was a population-based cross-sectional survey. All residents 18-70 years with ID living in the communities of six Swedish counties (N=2176) were invited to participate. Three age- and sex-matched controls per person with ID were randomly selected from the population at large. Anthropometry and blood pressure were measured. Fasting blood glucose, triglycerides, total cholesterol, high-density lipoprotein cholesterol and waist circumference were analysed. The diagnosis of MS was based on the National Cholesterol Education Program Adult Treatment Panel III criteria. The prevalence of MS was 5.2% in the general population, versus 24.7% in those with ID (95% CI 18.2% to 31.9%, P
