This question may sound silly to you but I am curious as to why we need to find the k th prime number. Couldn't we just start from 2 and count sequentially until we reach the k th prime number? Why do we need to find the k th prime number? A: Let's assume that we only look at prime numbers up to N . To find the k^{th} prime number, we have to look at all numbers n from 2 to N and count the ones which have exactly k prime factors. The k^{th} prime number is the first prime number that occurs more often than any smaller prime. How often do we get k prime factors? $\binom{n}{k} = \frac{n!}{k!(n-k)!}$ How often do we get $k-1$ prime factors? $\binom{n}{k-1} = \frac{n!}{(k-1)!(n-k+1)!}$ A: To be perfectly precise, we need the k^{th} prime number if we want to find the k^{th} prime factor of a prime number, and we can't just start from 2 . Take for example 5 . Since 2 is prime, 2 is the first prime number. 4bc0debe42
